Cinema Approaching Reality fills a giant gap in Chinese film studies as the first comprehensive and imaginative study of key theoretical debates on cinema in China and Hong Kong before 1950. More importantly, Victor Fan bridges or reestablishes the historical and philosophical connections between the Chinese discourses and Western film theory within the global context of modernity, capitalism, and imperialism, while offering refreshing insights into the life or temporality of the moving ... Cinema Approaching Reality: Locating Chinese Film Theory
In the 1930s, the version of approaching reality proposed by Gu Kenfu and Hou Yao was seriously challenged by a group of filmmakers and critics who began to employ Marxist vocabulary to reexamine both Chinese and Hollywood cinemas.

Cinema Approaching Reality: Locating Chinese Film Theory...
Victor Fan’s Cinema Approaching Reality: Locating Chinese Film Theory encourages a concept that has been long forgotten in studies of aesthetics and film criticism: “approaching reality”. There is a more accurate word to denote this idea in Chinese “bi zhen”. The concept of “bi zhen” or “approaching reality” has long existed in traditional Chinese arts [...]
